WHEREAS, at least 5,376 pedestrians were killed in motor vehicle collisions nationally in 2015, the highest number since 1996, and increased nearly ten percent (10%) from 2014 to 2015, the last years in which national data is available. (National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's National Center for Statistics and Analysis); and

WHEREAS, nearly 70,000 pedestrians were injured in motor vehicle collisions nationally in 2015, an increase of nearly eight percent (8%) from 2014 to 2015. (National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's National Center for Statistics and Analysis); and

(Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, Highway Loss Data Institute); and

WHEREAS, distraction-affected motor vehicle collision fatalities increased 8.8% nationally from 2014 to 2015, to a total of 3,477 deaths, with an additional 391,000 injured. (National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's National Center for Statistics and Analysis); and

WHEREAS, the American Journal of Public Health has found that separating pedestrians from vehicles by time or space is an effective approach to reducing pedestrian- involved motor vehicle collisions; and

WHEREAS, motor vehicle collisions caused at least ten (10) pedestrian deaths in Lexington-Fayette County in 2016, tying it with 2008 as its most deadly year of record; and

WHEREAS, in Lexington-Fayette County, at least three hundred ninety-seven (397) pedestrian-involved motor vehicle collisions have occurred since 2015, resulting in three hundred forty-four (344) injuries; and

WHEREAS, in 2016, twenty percent (20%) of all fatalities resulting from motor vehicle collisions in Lexington-Fayette County were pedestrians; and

WHEREAS, the total average annual daily traffic for all arterial roads in Lexington-Fayette County is more than two million (2,000,000) cars; and

WHEREAS, one-hundred ninety-six (196) motor vehicle collisions have involved hitting or crossing medians in Lexington-Fayette County since 2015, illustrating the threat of injury to those standing upon medians on heavily-trafficked roads; and

WHEREAS, preventing pedestrians and motor vehicles from being in close proximity to each other on roadways is a common sense approach to improving the safety of all involved; and

WHEREAS, the Mayor, Councilmembers, and various Departments in the Urban County Government have received numerous calls from residents relating their fear and concern for the safety of pedestrians that enter the roadway and medians; and

WHEREAS, this Ordinance applies to any pedestrian who crosses a heavily trafficked roadway outside of a crosswalk, any pedestrian who enters a heavily trafficked roadway and approaches a vehicle, and any pedestrian who is upon a median in a heavily trafficked roadway unless that person is in the process of crossing the roadway in a crosswalk; and

WHEREAS, the Ordinance addresses the conduct of those who enter heavily trafficked roadways or stay upon medians located on heavily trafficked roadways within Lexington-Fayette County, the areas where most pedestrian-involved motor vehicle collisions occur and where the risks associated with pedestrians and motor vehicles in close proximity are most profound; and

WHEREAS, the Kentucky Supreme Court in Champion v. Commonwealth, 2017 WL 636420, opined that banning pedestrians from approaching vehicles is a “content-neutral way the City could achieve the same goals [safe and efficient roadways] without unjustifiably abridging individual rights to free speech.”
